

© Max Rommel

Bigfish table

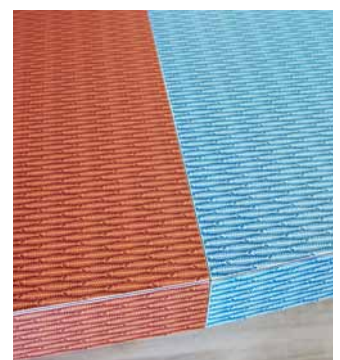

The project for the new table of the Domus Academy/Naba meeting room, born from the study of the location which house it and from the features detailed in the project.

The big room above the entrance of the campus has been dedicated to the meeting room of the important university pole in Milan: a very big and bright space which have to be able to host 18 people.

Starting from these assumptions, Giulio Iacchetti with Vittorio Venezia designed a table (5,1x1,8 mt) made of four elements that, mounted and screwed together, give origin to an irregular decagonal surface; the base of this table contains machinery and useful spaces.

The table has been covered with the "Fishbone" decor, Abet Laminati PARADE Collection; each element is characterized by a different coloured version and the result is a useful object able also to represent the School: an excellence in the field of the education of young designers.

Giulio Iacchetti

Conference table designed by Giulio Iacchetti with Vittorio Venezia